C. Mahoney : Games and Puzzles: a gift for a brave kid fighting cancer before purchasing it in order to gage whether or not it would be worth my time, and all praised Games and Puzzles: a gift for a brave kid fighting cancer:

Your niece or nephew or best friends kid has cancer. You walk into the hospital room with a smile on your face and a teddy bear in your hands, only to see two there already that are identical to the one you are holding. You wanted to do something special, something nice, something to help out that little kid. Well, you can. This activity book is filled with over 150 pages of fun so that your niece or nephew or friends kid doesnt have to face the battle alone. Hours of challenges will keep their mind on birds and rabbits and squirrels and lizards and centipedes, and not on the needles and tests and constant interruptions of the hospital room. Word puzzles. Number challenges. Sudoku. Drawing pages. Story starters. Scrambled words. Tic-Tac-Toe. Word searches. Five-in-a-row. Hangman. Weird facts about insects. Making words. Missing numbers. Pages with titles like: What makes you laugh? Ten words that describe love. How many cubes? Are you afraid of bees? Why is the sky blue? How many triangles can you find? Ten words that describe your mother. Reasons that you smile. Have you ever looked closely at a water drop? Why I like to read. What is your favorite game? I wish. What is that? Something funny happened today. How much money do I have? Silly conversations. And so much more A hundred hours of fun and challenges await the child who receives this activity book. Now, isnt that a lot better than a room full of stuffed animals? Get ready to play a few games of Tic-Tac-Toe, and yes, you can let them win. Its okay. Oh, dont forget to bring some colored pencils and a sharpener, and expect to be a very popular person.
