DuBoisIt's difficult to "bridge the gap" between the notes on the music and what keys they correspond with. This is a great teaching too. It's visual. I treat it as something I want my students to "memorize" as they would something for school. Not only does it show the names of the notes on the keys, more importantly, it shows the notes as they appear on the bass and treble staff.26 of 28 people found the following review helpful. keyboard guide vs. stickers = guide wins!By WorkingMomI debated between this keyboard guide and the stickers and then chose this. It's great as you can easily take it away once certain notes are mastered and always bring it back again to introduce or reinforce new notes. It also has the musical keys on it (not visible in the picture they have of it on here), so you don't just have the letter names but also see on this guide what the note looks like in the staff.59 of 61 people found the following review helpful. Key ChartBy Ashley PascoThis is an amazing fold out sheet of paper for a beginner. You simply place it behind your keys on your keyboard or piano and there you have all the keys you'll need to play. If you are somewhere where you can't play piano it makes a great practice sheet too. You can do all the fingerings while traveling or whatever you are doing where you can't actually play a real piano. I really love this sheet and am glad that I purchased it. I recommend this sheet to anyone who is learning how to play.

(Educational Piano Library). This handy reference for beginning students clearly shows the note names and the note positions on the treble and bass clefs. The front of the guide fits behind all 88 keys of any piano, and the back of the guide is a practice keyboard.
